Frequently Asked Questions:

What is the difference between Alliance Virtual Offices and a PO Box location?

A PO Box is a mailing address typically located at a retail postal store (also known as "pack and ship" store). A Virtual Office from Alliance provides a business address with a professional, fully serviced office that can be used to meet clients, work in privately for a day, or carry out any other typical office requirements. Our addresses can be used for mail, as well as important requirements such as business licensing and LLC formation. The center is professionally staffed and equipped with ready-to-use workspace, enabling established entrepreneurs and startups to work and conduct meetings on-demand. Our virtual office centers are typically located in central business districts or suburban office parks occupied by other professional, entrepreneurial and startup communities.
